“While single-family homes set a new record in September with a median price of $730,000, about 12 percent were sold below $500,000, demonstrating that there are options at all price points in the market – it just takes some looking,” said Jack Legal, president of the Honolulu Board of REALTORS®. “We are hopeful that the inventory of homes on the lower end of the spectrum will continue to grow to meet demand. In fact, the nearly 16 percent increase in condo sales over last year proves that more inventory is coming online for prospective homebuyers to consider.”
